

Daniel S. (Dan) Tucker

Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer | Southern Company

Daniel S. (Dan) Tucker is executive vice president and chief financial officer of Southern Company, one of America's largest public utilities serving nine million customers through its subsidiaries.

Prior to his current role, Tucker served as executive vice president, chief financial officer and treasurer of Georgia Power where he oversaw the accounting and finance functions of the company, including financial reporting and planning, regulatory accounting, analysis, and enterprise risk management. In addition, he shared responsibility for the company's innovative results delivery office.

Tucker has worked for Southern Company and its subsidiaries for over two decades and has held numerous positions within Southern Company in the areas of financial reporting, financial planning, investor relations, enterprise risk management, and treasury. He began his career in 1998 in financial reporting and, in 2000, moved to Southern Company's finance organization where he led the company's financial planning organization.

He was named vice president of investor relations and planning in 2012 and, subsequently, senior vice president and treasurer in 2015. In these roles, he worked to ensure alignment between the development of the Southern Company's financial plan and its communications strategy with equity and fixed-income investors. Additionally, he provided management oversight to one of the largest U.S. investment-grade debt portfolios. In 2019, Tucker transitioned to the role of executive vice president and chief financial officer of Southern Company Gas, its four state-regulated gas utilities and retail gas marketing company. Tucker also serves on the Energy Advisory Council of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta and as a member of the Board of Directors for Energy Insurance Mutual.

He holds a bachelor's degree from Kennesaw State University with a double major in accounting and finance.
